TWO PLUMMY VOICED LADIES AT A CAFE

F/X: SOUND OF A CAFÉ, CUPS CLINKING AND PEOPLE CHATTING

SARA: Hi Clare, are you ok? Sorry I'm late dear.

CLARE: That's ok. I've just got here myself. Would you like a drink?

SARA: Well, I was going to have a glass of water, but I could do with a glass of wine to be honest.

CLARE: Bad night?

SARA: Yes, I'm afraid so. I'm sure it's worse during the holidays.

CLARE: (laughing) Just keep telling yourself the sacrifice is worth it dear. I did read somewhere that they get a lot better when they get older. Well less physically tiring anyway.

SARA: I sincerely hope so. I was up most of last night trying to stop him crying.

CLARE: Well mine has been sleeping fine, since I had him in bed with me, although I'm a bit sick of being woken up having my breasts bitten.

SARA: Mines a bit old for that thank goodness, although I still seem to spend my entire life cleaning wee off the toilet seat.

LITTLE DARLINGS

CLARE: How would we cope if we had children?
